Investment Systems Partners With LANSA To Expand And Modernize Its Investment Solutions

Portfolio Managers to Benefit from New Functions and Greater Flexibility

Downers Grove, Illinois, USA — August 18, 2008 — For nearly a quarter of a century, Investment Systems Company (ISC) has been helping investment advisory firms, mutual funds companies and family offices track their clients' investments and portfolios. Recently, ISC selected LANSA as their choice for new technology to provide their clients with the latest capabilities for accessing the Web. Using RAMP from LANSA and LANSA's Web products, ISC will be able to provide additional Web functions in a secure, dynamic environment.

Ronni Bialosky, president of ISC, talked about the company's decision: "The ability to use one company to continue the technological advances of the Web, optimize for Windows and modernize legacy apps will enable us to provide additional services to our clients and set us apart from our competitors. Using LANSA's high-level language and common interface to accomplish these objectives means that we'll be able to rapidly provide these new functionalities to our customers."

ISC has always been focused on providing software that is customized to meet any specific requirements clients may have. Implementing LANSA will let ISC rapidly develop Web applications that allow users to dynamically and securely request a variety of reports. "The ability to easily enhance our existing systems to include the latest technology is important to us, to insure that our clients have the best solutions possible," said Bialosky.

Steve Gapp, president of LANSA Americas, said, "ISVs partner with LANSA for many reasons, but one is to insure their own software architecture from future technological advancements. Using LANSA, they can transform a System i RPG or COBOL package to a highly graphical Windows client server application and have it run on UNIX, Linux and the Web. Also, LANSA has a strategic partnership with both IBM and Microsoft, which helps our business partners expand their markets. We're delighted to welcome ISC to LANSA and look forward to its future growth and success."

Bialosky concluded, "This is an exciting time because I can see what the power of LANSA is."
